Well, it is a while since the pack ventured as far south as Mooya, spiritual home of Dangles, who set a run around the major historical artefacts of the shire seat, assisted by another historical artefact, JR. In the squalls and phucken phreezin gales. Nothing to an ancient mariner but unpleasant for most. Goretex ruled.

Mighty Aphrodite (a noted buffed history geek) was appointed run rapporteur which ensured the ruan and historical facks were awarded a score with a positive integer. Or it may have been due to her acute observation that the rest of the pack's eyes glazed over at the detail of 1860s Mooya and not being able to drop into the historical Hotel Adelaide for a drink and shelter from the elements.

Several people turned up for the tour. Tree Rooter expressed some surprise that Dangles had ever been to school - maybe because she doubted there was one to attend in his yooof.

The Egalitarian Hash

Where sobriety in moderation is tolerated

Trash Volume: loud and with bass

But they paused outside the evidence of the existence of an edifice of learning.

Out of curiosity Lost Rooster and others perused it from outside and saw desks or stuff. Oh, is what they look like?

Then it was on to some ancient stone mason joint where Dangles uncle was the main man. Shadow was disappointed there was not a working demonstration.

And then a flamin church - usually to be avoided in case of lightning strikes and other unpleasant things. SueEllen genuflected in case.

Fortunately, Lost Rooster and others avoided any disaster and moved on to the pub, but no beer, shock horror. JR shook with deprivation symptoms.

Dangles then detoured the mob to one of his former homes for all to admire or speculate on whether it may even be a reform home for wayward children that has recently been tarted up a bit.

From there, via a few more mind-numbing highlights and a circle with G'n'T in a historic playground adjacent to the venerable bowlo, the pack meandered soddenly and gratefully to form a warm circle where JR leant over backwards to observe the scene while Pop Tart held forth.

And Blue Hawaii got all the awards that were on offer, thus ensuring her return some time.

Then it was on to the mash, shit kicker music and muscat. And somehow ignoring a splendid Wallabies win.

Em tasol.
