Well, there were a few miracles for Christmas this year.

- Every one of the three dozen "runners" was at the start on time. (Even B2 although there was some debate about that)
- No one got lost (for long)
- The Gin Sluts did the entire distance to the drink stop and return without vehicular assistance
- The awesome Sniffer Dog arrived from gordnosewhere and avoided a fate worse than death.
- Gobbles set a new record of not quite getting through his third successive Christmas hash (jet lag is a reasonable excuse)
- No-one was arrested for anything, and the Bayview said we can come back.

As hinted at above the entire pack was assembled in the beer garden at the Bayview in time for an early start. Clear and unconfusing chalk talk from the GeeEmm was absorbed by almost everyone and the pack bifurcated. Walkers through the bar onto the footpath and turn west. Runners (well, keener walkers) out the back of the beer garden and head south before taking an easterly tilt, then generally north, Or something. B2 did another thing entirely..

This meant that for another miracle, Energizer, Winnie and Buns were front walking baskets! This odd condition applied for the entire distance along Orient Street, across the statuesque new bridge and onon to the drink stop at the Oyster Shed on the banks of the glittering Clyde River.

Others took a while but still crossed the bridge.

There were a few stragglers.

Now...where was I when I was rudely interrupted? Who cares?

Well, as I was saying, the mob/s eventually got to the little red roof oyster shed down Wray Street where the sun was shining' the water was glittering girtiferously and some very fresh oysters had leapt out of the water, got shucked and plonked onto a plate. The hordes fell upon them.

There were also a few kilos of hapless but fresh prawns all the way from the Crystal waters of Crystal Bay. And a deep bucket, where you could surprisingly find B2 under the more or less watchful gaze of senior hasher and SE Asian tour guide JR.

After the bucket had been depleted the pack meandered to the drink stop conveniently located across the river in another salubrious girtside park with a handy dunny and waited longingly until Gobbles turned up with a replenished bucket and some down down drinking vessels.

Some posed for the obligatory photo op.

Others just milled or talked among themselves.

Some famous visitors travelled thousands of km to get there.

A circle sorta formed.
 The RA took all credit necessary for the absolutely splendid weather and no one disagreed.

The Hare (GeeEmm) accepted the rather hefty score of 4.99 with due humility and also accepted the obeisance of an international beer from Kangaroo Island.

Too Keen who represented the MBH3 with some others including Haemorrhoid and Lickalotta (absent with COVID) at Rover's wake at Belowra recently, was charged for her abandoned conduct of a user trial on the newly refurbished al fresco bathtub in the company of Dame Nellie.

After yet another emptying of the bucket and a boisterous rendition of the MBH3 anthem and a quick phone call from or to co-Founders Captain Pugwash and Sticky Date, it was off to the hysterical Bayview Beer Garden for a quiet drink or three, some solids and the visit from Sandy Claws.

And after that.....

Em tasol.
